

Welcome New Adjunct Faculty to the Graduate Counseling Psychology Program

DR. JADE LOGAN

Jade is a staff psychologist at Saint Joseph's University Counseling and Psychological Services Center. Her clinical interests are in the treatment of substance abuse in college populations, trauma with a focus on rape and relationship violence, and multicultural psychology with a focus on clinical training and supervision. Dr. Logan draws from a relational-cultural model of psychotherapy while incorporating techniques from behavioral, cognitive, and interpersonal modalities of psychotherapy. She teaches Internship Seminar I and II.

DR. ELIZABETH SOUCAR

Elizabeth has worked with diverse communities and populations in community mental health centers and outpatient substance abuse clinics. She has also counseled individuals with mild intellectual disabilities, chronic pain, trauma, and young women with mood disorders. Dr. Soucar has a private practice in Doylestown, PA, with specialties in relationship issues, child or adolescent therapy, and mood disorders. She teaches Group Counseling.

DR. JOHN MONOPOLI

John has a private practice in Voorhees, NJ, and mindfulness is his chief clinical and theoretical interest. Dr. Monopoli has pursued a dual clinical and academic career having practiced in diverse settings as a school psychologist, a therapist in community mental health center and inpatient and outpatient psychiatric centers for adolescents and adults and rehabilitation for elderly patients with psychological or cognitive deficits. He teaches Child & Adolescent Counseling.

FACULTY NEWS

As an experienced licensed professional counselor, Chris Walter also maintains a private practice in Doylestown, largely informed by his expertise in Transpersonal Psychotherapy and Breathwork. This past summer, Chris engaged a six-day intensive Breathwork training entitled, "The Individual, Collective, and the Eternal". Chris describes Transpersonal Psychotherapy as incorporating psychology into spirituality. In his words, "Transpersonal Breathwork is a deep, meditative group process that allows individuals to connect with previously 'disowned' parts of the self, or other layers of consciousness. "Unlike a medical model of care, which may be focused on symptom suppression, this work includes transformation via amplification and integration of breathwork experiences, whatever they might be."

Dr. Audrey Ervin co-authored What Do White Counselors and Psychotherapists Need to Know About Race? White Racial Socialization in Counseling and Psychotherapy Training Programs. This powerful article, recently published in Women & Therapy, discusses issues surrounding multicultural training in academic counseling and psychotherapy programs which are designed to address issues of minority populations but which rarely focus on the socially imbedded and learned experience of White privilege. The article examines skills and awareness needed for white counselors and psychotherapists to promote racial justice in their communities and individual practice.
